

In the middle of the teal blue sea, there was a small island where bright, colourful parrots soared up high into the clouds. Because the clouds were soft like candyfloss, beautiful butterflies could drift right through them. On the island, careful, smiling people went about on their daily jobs.

On the island, there was a volcano that stands tall like a soldier. If it gets angry it would either belch out Obsidian black smoke or mumble like a giant mumbling in his sleep. When it got really mad lava would come charging out really fast.

The large, rocky volcano is standing tall as a soldier. Bang. It rumbled. It let out a mighty roar... Because the giant, jagged volcano is about to erupt, all of the villagers must be on the tawny brown boat.

After they leave the peaceful island will the worried villagers be safe? If they do find a new island will they be safe?

Smash! The large volcano erupted lava came spitting out like a firework. After a few hours it stopped and only a humongous hole was left. Then plants and palm trees grew back and animals came out from where they ~~shattered~~ sheltered and birds came back. The villagers returned to their island paradise and it was better than before. There were colourful butterflies and squawking parrots.

