

Friday 20th October

The giant volcano

In the middle of the ~~ocean~~ blue moving aqua sea was a golden marigold island. There were ~~fern forest~~ fern canopy fresh coconuts palm trees swaying. ~~Swish!~~ Swish! Swish! Swish! Luscious green plants tangled everywhere like messy hair. Tropical fruits dangle down from way up high in the treetops. Bushy evergreen leaves covered with heavy, heavy, spiky fresh coconuts. The branches are as brown as ~~the~~ cocoa like the sand is as yellow as butter.

Above the evergreen trees was a volcano at the bottom of the volcano butterflies glittered glower to glower. Inside was blistering boiling lava as red as ~~dirty~~ strawberries. Most of the time it rumbled like a giant spring. Sometimes the volcano was so jagged it cracked. The crusty volcano cracks like an earthquake inside is coloured magma fizzing like a coke bottle. The crusty volcano inside had amber lava bubbling like a jacuzzi. There were rocks raining fast downhill quickly like an ice cream dripping down a cone. I sick out like a jam doughnut. The volcano is as hard as a crystal after use I feel magma is as bright as a school jumper.

For countless day's smelly ash, coal - dark smoke come pouring out it covered the yellow sunset. The volcano vibrated and the ground shook and it was so violent that the people panicked. Every day they get even more scared. The world is like a barbecue. The next day...

People gathered all their special belongings and goodies.
They quickly made boats they couldn't find anywhere parts so fast people swam for their lives. Just before as the people left the volcano exploded out like fireworks. The volcano the volcano exploded out with ketchup lava it destroyed everything in its path. Lava oozed down like an orange river. When it exploded out with lava it left a path of smoking and sliding killing the village that was left behind.

Will I ever return to my original island home?

